Happy Birthday today to Leah J.

This week we are celebrating Hispanic Heritage Month. Hispanic Heritage Month celebrates the cultures and histories of people with heritage from Spain, Mexico, the Caribbean, and Central and South America. It's also a way to honor the many achievements and contributions by Hispanic people in the United States and around the world. This week we will celebrate by completing many activities, enjoying music and dance focusing on Hispanic heritage. Please make sure you visit the Hispanic Heritage month art display in the B wing and C wing. The students did a wonderful job creating artwork inspired by Frida Kahlo and Diego Rivera.

La Bamba

The first song to celebrate Hispanic Heritage this week is "La Bamba" by Ritchie Valens. He was an American guitarist, singer, songwriter, rock and roll pioneer, and a forefather of the Chicano rock movement. Sadly, Valens was killed in a plane crash just eight months into his music career at age 17.

Valens transformed the Mexican folk song "La Bamba" into a hit with a rock rhythm and beat, making Valens a pioneer of the Spanish-speaking rock and roll movement.

Valens received many awards after his death, including being inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and getting a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. He changed the history of Rock and Roll and paved the way for Hispanic American singers after him!

"La Bamba" is often sung at parties and weddings in Mexico as a means of celebration and is simply the name of the dance. The song's lyrics, when translated into English, are about moving around and having a good time, and dancing The Bamba with a bit of grace.

Family day tomorrow. Self-control wear family color
